A plastic-free Chamundi Hills

Chamundi Hills: Though Chamundi Hills is a plastic-free zone, it remains polluted with plastic. NSS students of JSS Nursing College gathered at the foothills of Chamundi Hills to clean the roads and the steps, on account of the 96th Jayanti of Mother Sri Sri Jagadamba Swamiji. 'Plastic Free Day' was celebrated last night. Over 100 students equipped with gloves and garbage bags. The area around Chamundi Hills looked exceptionally clean after the event. Authorities declared Chamundi Hills as 'Plastic-free zone' a couple of years ago. Some citizens have cooperated but many have ignored the announcement. Plastic pollution has not only ruined the sanctity of the sacred hill, but also caused problems for natural flora and fauna in the hills, such as leopards, monkeys and dogs. Therefore, students patched in to clean Chamundi Hills from morning to noon and made it plastic-free once again. The event successfully accomplished their goal and the hill was a clean place by afternoon.

Students actively participated in the event and cleaned the area with enthusiasm, hoping that their efforts will last for a long time. The students and staff were dressed in white.

'Condoms cannot completely prevent AIDS'

Contract workers of KSAPS stage protest

APRIL 26: It is not possible to completely prevent AIDS. Condoms prevent transmission but do not completely prevent it. This was the message given by the contract workers of KSAPS during a protest held in the city. The workers, led by the union leader, expressed their concerns about the spread of AIDS and the need for more awareness and prevention measures. They also demanded better working conditions and safety measures from the management.

The protest was held in front of the KSAPS office in the city. The workers held banners and placards, and sang protest songs. They also distributed pamphlets and leaflets about AIDS prevention. The management of KSAPS expressed its regret over the protest and assured that it would take necessary steps to address the workers' concerns.
